

Citation Quiz A

True or False?

1. A single style of citation serves all disciplines, from the humanities and social sciences to technology and biology.
2. Scholars demonstrate the extent of their research and support their arguments by citing sources.
3. Proper documentation provides the reader with all the information needed to locate a cited source.
4. A summary of an article, chapter, or book need not use a citation of any kind.
5. The exact language of others, even if that language is just one or two unique words, must be clearly identified by placing it between quotation marks.
6. When paraphrasing a source, authors should simply “translate” the words in the passage by using a thesaurus to substitute a different vocabulary for the original words.
7. A paraphrase should not include the original sentence structure or the original language from the cited passage.
8. Documentation for a webpage need only identify the url of the cited information.
9. A webpage without an author does not need a citation.
10. Internet sources do not need to be cited.
11. Images captured from websites do not need to be cited.

Multiple Choice

12. Use quotation marks to:
 - a. distinguish the exact language of others from your own.
 - b. impress your instructor with your thorough research.
 - c. avoid developing your own ideas.
 - d. b and c
13. What is the purpose of using quotation marks?
 - a. To clearly identify the exact language of others
 - b. To indicate dialogue
 - c. To set off the title of an article, essay, chapter, or poem
 - d. All of the above
14. Why should scholars provide full bibliographic information for all cited sources?
 - a. To help readers locate the source
 - b. To indicate the exact language of others
 - c. Both of the above
15. Quotation marks must be used when:
 - a. citing three or more words.
 - b. citing as few as one or two unique or particularly inventive words.
 - c. Both of the above